NEGLECT IS CHARGED TO CITY

W. A. Snow Blames Officials for the Wreck of Buildings; Probably Explosion, Says O'Hearn

Investigation begun today into the collapse of three buildings on Portland street, now heaps of bricks and twisted steel, revealed these facts:

1—That complaint had been made to the building inspection department that a six-story building at No. 71 Portland street, undergoing alterations, was unsafe and a menace to the life of occupants of other buildings, and that this building collapsed and brought down two neighboring buildings.

2—That the complaint has been looked into by Inspector M. C. Carroll of the building department and he had reported to the persons making the complaint:

"The building is all right. It will not fall. There is no danger."

CRITICIZES OFFICIALS.

W. A. Snow of the W. A. Snow Iron Works Company today said that he notified the building inspection department that the wall of the six-story department was bulging, and, in his opinion, was likely to collapse at any moment. The building he occupies, a one-story structure adjoining the six-story building, was buried when the neighboring buildings collapsed.

He vigorously assailed the building department and said he would demand that Mayor Curley, and possibly Commissioner Herrick, speak out in meeting and allow a building to be a menace to the lives of citizens, as in this case.

"I have been thirty years in the iron business in Boston and in close touch with building operations in the city, and I have found that fair builders in the city can get away with things with the approval of the building inspection department which others cannot.

TO "GO THE LIMIT"

"If this accident had occurred in the daytime instead of at night, at least seventy-five persons would have been killed or injured. I mean to go the limit to find out why the building department could have allowed this to happen after complaints had been made."

Building Commissioner Ahearn today defended his department. He said that Inspector Carroll is a competent man and that evidence has come to him which indicates that an explosion caused the collapse of the buildings.

That Inspector Carroll had called the building every day since a week ago Monday and each time pronounced it safe, was also brought out by the statement made by Commissioner

20 DEAD IN QUEBEC HORROR

Suspect Incendiary in Hospital Blaze; Heroic Nun Saved Lives of 41; Small Boy Is Hero

Farnham, Que., Oct. 27.—The death list at the St. Elizabeth Hospital fire grew today, till it was believed twenty persons had lost their lives.

Three more fires broke out in the neighborhood last night and incendiarism is suspected.

The property loss was about $150,000. The known death list last night was placed at 13.

The heroine of the fire was Sister Benoit, one of the nuns in charge of the hospital.

When the fire broke out she had tried to go upper window, and about there passing out frightened children, and other folk to the firemen on the ladder.

She saved forty-five lives, at the dreadful risk of her own, and only when the last person on that floor was out did she leave her post.

William Bilton, a fourteen-year-old boy, was a hero of the horror. He carried a number of little children from the building to his shoulders.

The work of recovering the terribly charred bodies from the ruins began today. Besides those caught in the building, many children jumped from windows, and four of them at least are expected to die.

A railroad section hand, rushing to the scene on a hand car, was killed.

Haverhill Riot Evidence Closed; Case Nears Jury

Lawrence, Oct. 27.—The case Mayor Albert I. Herbert of Haverhill and four Aldermen who are on trial here on the charge of failing to suppress a riot at the Haverhill City Hall on April 5, when Thomas E. Lyons attempted to give a lecture, will go to the jury late today. Both sides rested soon after court opened.

The first witness was James Lynch, official stenographer of the Superior Court, who read a transcript of the testimony given by Mayor Herbert before the Essex County Grand Jury.

He was followed by Sergeant James C. Reardon of Lawrence, who was sent to City Hall on the night of the riot as the leader of a squad of policemen.

After Sergeant Reardon finished his testimony attorneys for the Mayor and the Aldermen started arguments.

Charlotte Smith Accused of Theft

Miss Charlotte Smith, one of the best-known social workers in Boston, appeared before Judge Cabot in the City Court today in answer to a subpoena and complaint, charging her with larceny of property valued at $15 from Thomas J. Gavin of No. 66 Irving street, Watertown, on July 24 last.

Miss Smith did not plead. The case was continued to Monday, October 30, she was allowed to go on her own recognizance.

Miss Smith was accompanied to her attorney, Henry Herbin. Mr. Gavin was not in court, but was represented by counsel. Both lawyers declined to discuss the case in any way.

10 GERMAN WARSHIPS IN RAID

Spectacular Combat in Channel Results in the Defeat of the Germans, London Says

London, Oct. 27. — Two German destroyers were sunk by British warships in a spectacular battle in the British Channel yesterday as a result of a raid by ten destroyers on the British cross-channel service, the Admiralty announced today.

The other destroyers were driven off, the statement added.

London, Oct. 27.—Russia is preparing to make an effort to save Rumania. The salvation of the menaced kingdom is now foremost in the minds of the members of Petrograd government.

More troops and guns and ammunition from Japan are being sent into the Rumanian theatre of war to help the Rumanian army drive back the forces under Von Falkenhayn and Von Mackensen. It was reported here today that there are Japan officers and artillerymen among the latest recruits sent to the Rumanian war theatre.

Berlin dispatches today say that the engineers in the army of Field Marshal Von Mackensen in Dobrudja have begun to repair the great Danube bridge at Cernavoda, which was blown up by the retreating Rumanians.

Advices from Sofia today state that huge supplies of building materials has been carried along by the Von Mackensen army group, for it was thought that the Rumanians would try to destroy the Cernavoda bridge if they were driven from their bridgehead position.

AMERICANS NOT IN PLOT, SAYS BAKER

By WILLIAM D. HASSETT.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Complete denial that any Americans were implicated in the alleged plot to embarrass the Wilson administration by engineering an attack either upon American civilians or American border towns between now and election day was made by Secretary of War Baker today.

He declared emphatically that there was no thought of political expediency in making public his charges. On the contrary, he said his action was taken with the intention of showing how the anti-Carranzista Mexican politicians in this country were endeavoring to complicate Mexican affairs.

At the same time Secretary of State Lansing announced that the Baker statement had been made public at his (Lansing's) suggestion after all of the facts in the case as developed by the Department of Justice had been communicated to him by Secretary Baker.

The statement said:

"The War Department has received definite information, confirmed from other sources, that enemies of the administration's policy towards Mexi-

Leyland Liner, With Mounted Gun, Is in Port

The Leyland liner Anglian arrived in Boston today from London with a 4.7-inch naval gun mounted on the stern deck for defence against submarine attacks.

The gun was mounted just before the Anglian sailed from London and two gunners, Robert Button and Charles Goodland, were assigned by the Admiralty to take charge of the weapon. Button served on H. M. S. Broke in the battle of Jutland and was on a light cruiser which engaged in the chase after the German fleet that raided Scarborough several months ago.

On the voyage the gunners engaged in target practice for the instruction of the officers and crew of the Anglian.

According to Button the first shot at a barrel, more than a mile astern, sent the stoves flying in the air and set the whole ship's company cheering.

GIRL 'SLAVE' CASE WITNESS MISSING

When the case of Antonio Mauro of Middleton, N. Y., who is held in Chelsea as an accessory after the fact to the murder of Cosmo Di Nuccio of Providence, October 10, was called in the Chelsea Court today, Mauro's counsel failed to appear and the case was continued a week.

The police said that Mae Alley, upon whom they relied as the principal witness against Mauro, had disappeared.

Di Nuccio's murder was laid to a white slave gang. One of the fugitives, the police say, was helped to escape by Mauro, whom he met in Chelsea.

GERMAN CREDIT IS $13,500,000,000

Berlin, by wireless to Sayville, Oct. 27.—The budget committee of the Reichstag and the Secretary of the Treasury, Count von Roedern, have discussed the financial situation and the government's policy of consolidating the floating debt in long-term loans. The Reichstag has granted war credits of 54,000,000,000 marks ($13,500,000,000). Of this, 48,800,000,000 marks were expended up to September 30, of which 500,000,000 were provided by long-term loans and the remainder by sale of Treasury bills.

BIG BASEBALL WAR IS THREATENED

The American and National leagues today are on the brink of warfare.

Right now it seems that nothing can avert a serious clash except an apology from Ban Johnson for his many verbal attacks on the National League during the past two years. He was never known to back down from any stand he has taken.

Johnson's most recent criticisms of the older organization concerning the John Murray Boudeer affair and John J. Tener to anger, and the National League president is quoted as having heatedly said:

"Ban Johnson should wash his own dirty linen before he attempts to do any cleaning for the National League. I won't stand for any further criticism from Johnson concerning the operations of my league."

The entire National League, it is said, has backed up Tener in his reply-attack on Johnson. The soreness of the old league long have been increased by what they term "Johnson's slurring remarks," and his most re-

co, in co-operation with Villa or other bandits in Mexico, have arranged a spectacular attack to be made either upon some part of the American forces or upon some American community on the border between now and the date of the election, for the purpose of turning the tide of sentiment against the policy which the administration has adopted for the protection of the border.

"It is significant in this connection that both the State and War Departments were advised that the bandit forces operating at the present time in Mexico are being paid in silver coin.

"Full particulars have been transmitted to General Funston and General Pershing. All American forces are, therefore, forewarned and in readiness for such an attack."

"Secretary Lansing authorizes the statement that Secretary Baker had an intention to intimate that American citizens were involved in the border attack plot. The Secretary of State said it had been called to his attention that an effort would be made to construe the War Department's statement as a political play and as an assault upon the administration's political opponents.

"He denounced such a construction as absolutely false, declaring that politics was not given a thought in connection with the matter and that it was inconceivable that any American would rely himself with Mexicans to attack his own countrymen.

"Mr. Lansing saw the statement before it was issued, and discussed it with Secretary Baker. He explained that both he and Mr. Baker believed that in addition to warning the military commanders, for whom it was to go, the information received publicity because it might have the effect of silencing the plot to be abandoned."

It is announced that the Departments of State, War and Justice are co-operating in the investigation now well under way, and that arrests of persons alleged to be implicated in the alleged plot may shortly be made. These persons are said to be leaders in the Legalista movement in Mexico and followers of Felix Diaz.

Discussing the situation Secretary Baker said:

"The obviously appropriate answer of the Secretary of State to the announcement precludes any possibility of a misunderstanding. The announcement suggests—breaks up the plans by publicity.

"Those people in Mexico who have been raiding the United States are opposed to this government's Mexican policy. The Mexican opponents of the de facto government of Mexico would be glad to complicate relations between the United States and Mexico, and think this an appropriate time to do so. A large number of men who have withdrawn from Mexico are in this country constantly working against the government of Mexico.

"The statement made by the department ought to discourage any adventure on their part in that direction. It is unthinkable that political efforts of President Wilson's administration in the United States should be directed to such activities. The only possible suggestion of a political purpose is to prevent people in Mexico from creating a disturbance of a political character to furtherance of their own designs."

Secretary Lansing was asked whether the purposes of the Pershing expedition have been changed.

"They have not," he said.

"Will Pershing now be ordered to run down Villa and capture him as was originally intended?" the Secretary was asked. "I cannot answer that," was the reply.

He refused to say where he received his information and declined to make any explanation as to whether arrests had not already been made.

The resumption of fighting about Chihuahua has not been officially noticed by the de facto government heads. The last word from Chihuahua City was that the Constitutionalist troops were effecting an encircling movement around the Villista at Santa Ysabel.

Stevens, who today has started an investigation on his own account.

PELLETIER MAY AID.

That District Attorney Pelletier and the Grand Jury will join in the investigation of the collapse was reported today following the charges of Snow against the building department.

Mr. Snow, who was endeavoring to conduct his business from a suite in the Quincy House today, stated that the south wall of the six-story building which first collapsed bulged considerably and trembled for the last two days, and the danger was so obvious that it had been noticed by all his employees.

"I knew something about structural work," he said, "and I became convinced that the building was dangerous. I notified the building department through T. J. Kelliher, one of my men, and they sent down an inspector, who went through the building and then told me it was safe, that it wouldn't fall, and that there was no danger."

He said he would come down and look the building over every day, but I never saw him again, and the first time he was here was a week ago on Monday.

NO BODIES IN RUINS.

Firemen and members of the Boston Protective Department searched the ruins a greater part of the night for bodies, but abandoned this work early today. It had been reported that a woman had been buried in the collapse, but the authorities say that this is unlikely.

Some employees of the Snow Iron Works, which is sandwiched between the six-story building which first collapsed and a four-story structure which was the second to fall, have been working every night for some weeks until last night, when by the merest chance no one worked. W. A. Snow was one of those who intended to work last night, but because his stenographer had been invited to a whist party and his chief clerk had a cold he changed his mind and went to his Summer home at Harvard.

EXPLOSION, SAYS O'HEARN.

Commissioner O'Hearn today said:

"I believe that an explosion caused the collapse. I have two witnesses who were across the street at the time who both claim there was an explosion. One of these was Captain Riley of Engine 4, who says the explosion was a violent one. The other witness states that the explosion was so violent that it blew him out of a chair in which he was sitting.

"I feel sure that the cause of the collapse will not be because of the building in this office. However, if it proves that this department has been in any way with nothing be concealed. The bulging and trembling referred to by Mr. Snow occurred when the new inside wall I ordered to be built was being 'tied' to the old. The necessary chiseling would cause any wall to tremble."

Michael C. Carroll, the inspector who answered Mr. Snow's complaint, said:

"I was ordered to investigate Mr. Snow's complaint. I went down and saw another Mr. Snow and listened to his story, as W. A. Snow was out. After hearing the complaint I went thoroughly over the building that was being rebuilt. I found nothing out of the way and that the new was being complied with in all particulars."

E. W. Roomer, who received the complaint from Secretary Damrell of the Building Department, said:

"I received the Snow complaint and turned it over to Mr. Carroll for investigation in the regular way."

Several concerns doing business in the wrecked places suffered total losses. The damage will run into the thousands.

The collapse of the wall occurred in the building at No. 23-25 Portland street. It was in process of reconstruction and is owned by Morris Gutlon of No. 241 Humboldt avenue.

"BUG POISON" CASE TAKEN FROM JURY

The $10,000 breach of promise suit of Miss Katherine T. Coleman against John T. Canty, on trial in the Superior Jury session today, was taken from the jury and a verdict ordered for Canty by the court.

The action was brought to an end on the ground that it was brought on multiplicatory grounds.

Miss Coleman keeps a lodging house. According to her testimony the marriage was to have taken place on Thanksgiving eve, in 1914. A bottle of bug exterminator which Canty drank instead of a bottle of ale that he supposed was beside his bed figured in the evidence. Love's dream suffered in consequence of the exterminator, and Mr. Canty left the house, four weeks before the marriage was to have taken place.

Miss Coleman said she had her wedding clothing bought, and that the bans were to be published the following Sunday.

"When he left the house he said he was ill, and we would have to let the marriage go by. And he would come to see me quite often."

The witness testified that she bought her wedding dress in September, that Canty gave her $100 to buy her dress, some coin and a wedding ring. She said she bought the dress, paid $42.50 for coal, but did not buy the ring.

Mr. Canty on the stand said:

"I never made love to Miss Coleman, no more than I'd be jollying her, and she'd be jollying me."

Q.—Did you think she was jollying you when she got the $100? A.—I don't know, she had me baffled out of it.

Q.—Did you ever give her money to buy a wedding ring? A.—I never did.

Miss Coleman brought her action on November 9. Judge King in his ruling said the English courts recognize the breach of an anticipatory contract—that Massachusetts laws require that the actual time should have expired before suit—could be instituted as the party making the promise might change his mind and fulfill the contract.

TELLS JURY HOW SHE KILLED HUSBAND

Mrs. Margaret Claire Beutinger, New York woman on trial for slaying husband, who told a dramatic story of his cruelty, with a description of the death scene as the climax.

New York, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Margaret Claire Beutinger, on trial for killing her husband, brought to a dramatic climax her story of the ten years she spent under the yoke of Christof Beutinger. The story ended with the death of the coal broker at her hands on July 11 last.

The case was expected to reach the jury today.

"I was still weak and ill from the beatings he had given me during the previous week," she testified. "My husband came into my room three times during the early morning of July 11. My little girls—Margaret and Marie—were sleeping in twin beds near my own.

"Twice I drove him out. Then I secreted a revolver I had just purchased under the bedclothes. He came in again.

"Chris,' I said, 'I am through with you. I am going to divorce you.'

"His eyes bulged, he screamed out a threat to kill me and rushed forward. The blazing eyes fascinated me, but quickly I drew out the revolver.

FIRES AT HUSBAND.

"He came nearer. I raised the pistol and fired. I could see only his bulging eyes. He staggered. Mechanically, I kept on pulling the trigger. I screamed, 'Help, Louise; help John.' The servants came. Then I fainted."

Beutinger's brutality was boundless, the wife said. He mistreated her on their honeymoon, in their home in the Philippines and in their travels in the West Indies, China, Siberia, Germany, Switzerland and the United States.

TWO BABIES DIED.

Seven times in almost as many years she became a mother. Two of the babies died. Even these tragedies, she said, did not soften the husband.

She told of his love of drink and gambling and of his alleged grafting when he was in the quartermaster's department in the Philippines. A year and a half ago she divorced him. Upon his promising to do better and upon advice of her priest, she was remarried to him and they lived in Westchester, and then in Caldwell, N. J.

Here matters went from bad to worse. His cruelty culminated in a quarrel on the night of July 5, six days before the murder.

"He got up and struck me in the face and tried to choke me," she said. "I seized a cardboard box and tried to defend myself. He crushed the box and almost gouged one of my eyes out with his forefinger."

While Mrs. Beutinger was in court with her five little children, a quarrel broke into her home and stole a quantity of jewelry and money. The money was taken from a bank owned by eight-year-old Margaret Beutinger, one of two daughters of the defendant.

DEFENCE OPENS IN THE 'ARSON TRUST' CASE

The defence opened its case in the "arson trust" trial today. Attorneys Barnes, Pratt and Clune addressing the jury.

The first witness was S. Ackerman, a building contractor, who testified to an interview he had with Sam Lischner. The conversation was concerning a job to remodel the building on Dudley street. Ackerman was one of seven witnesses called for the defence, of which number five are the defendants.

Lischner summoned Ackerman into the courtroom to listen to the testimony and occupied a chair during the witness stand.

He had previously been cross-examined by Attorney Clune regarding his actions before the fire in the Dudley street building, as follows:

TELLS OF ROUTE.

Q.—Who went with you to the automobile in the house before the fire was set? A.—Jake and Izzy Leventhal, Sam Small, the chauffeur and myself.

Q.—What else was in the automobile? A.—Izzy Leventhal had a hand bag.

He described the route they took from East Boston to the Dudley street house.

Q.—Where did the auto finally stop? A.—On Dudley street in front of the building down the street a little ways.

Q.—Who got out of the car? A.—Izzy got out, and Izzy took his bag.

Q.—What was the chauffeur told to do? A.—To come back to the same place at 11 o'clock.

Q.—Did you ever see Matthews, the tailor, till after the first fire? A.—No.

At this point Assistant District Attorney Daniel V. Mahan began to object to questions on the ground that they were repetitions of former inquiries. The judge allowed Attorney Clune to continue, despite repeated protests from Mr. Mahan.

MET BEFORE FIRE.

Q.—Did you meet Sam Lischner before the fire? A.—Yes.

Q.—Arranged to go out there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you talk to Lischner? A.—In the building.

Q.—What was said to Matthews, the tailor, when you all talked to him? A.—We told him to vacate the place.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He said he wouldn't close up till 5:30 or 9:00 o'clock.

Q.—Did he know the house was to be burned? A.—Yes.

Q.—How do you know? A.—Levine and Lischner told me.

Q.—Did Matthews tell you so? A.—No.

Kandler said that the cans of turpentine were taken to the second floor of the Dudley street building.

Q.—When was that? A.—That was Tuesday, the day of the first fire.

NO LOCK ON DOOR.

Q.—Was the room open? A.—The room was open and no lock on the door.

Q.—Where did you put the cans? A.—In the room between some lumber.

Q.—How long did the cans remain there? A.—Until Tuesday night.

Q.—Then you took the turpentine out. A.—No, we had small cans into which we emptied the turpentine. Each man carried a can.

Assistant District Attorney Mellane in redirect examination asked witness one question.

Q.—Have you been in the building since the evening of February 15 when you set the fire? A.—No, sir.

Attorney McIsaac then addressed the court, saying: "That is the case of the Commonwealth, Your Honor."

STRIKE THREAT IN FALL RIVER

Fall River, Oct. 27.—The refusal of the Fall River cotton manufacturers, representing nearly 100 cotton mill corporations, to grant the operatives a general advance in wages of 10 per cent, to go into effect November 6, has brought Fall River again face to face with an industrial crisis.

Upward of 26,000 hands are involved in the present agitation. The seriousness of the situation becomes apparent through the action of the Textile Council in voting to call special general meetings of all textile unions next Wednesday night for the purpose of voting on the question of a strike.

The vote will be "yes" or "no."

The Textile Council, which includes the five textile unions of the city, petitioned the Cotton Manufacturers Association for an increase in wages of 10 per cent. on October 1. It was requested in the petition that an answer to the demand for an advance be made by last night, but none was received.

SCITUATE CITIZENS CLASH ON MONUMENT

Scituate citizens are agitated because of the wrangle the soldiers' monument has precipitated. The opinion about evenly divided. The injunction granted in the Superior Court a fortnight ago restraining the committee from awarding the contract to James Craig & Company of Quincy, as planned, has lent added interest to the controversy that has caused the entire town to take sides.

The objectors' petition states that the proposed monument is "of little artistic merit, ill-proportioned and not of a character and dignity commensurate with the end sought to be obtained."

NELSON CHARGE TO BE MADE MURDER

The charge against Andrew Nelson which was that of assault and battery with intent to kill, will be changed to one of murder. Nelson attacked Carrie Dellanach who lived on Camden street, South End, as the result of an argument over $1.25 which Nelson owed her. The woman was so badly beaten that she died early today at the City Hospital. Nelson's home is on Willard place, South End.

POLICE TO OUST HORSE "BOOKIES"

Horse racing "bookies" who have made their headquarters on the Common are to be driven off that stronghold, according to Captain Calvery of the Lagrange Street Station, despite the fact that two of the visiting fraternity were found not guilty in the City Police Court. The police charge that those desiring to make bets on the horses have been accommodated by agents with headquarters on the Tremont street mall.

BAXTER SNUBBED AT HUGHES RALLY

Charles F. Baxter, the man who contributed the successful campaign that sent the Hall Guard marching off to Troy to vote for Hughes, and who was later urged to run the Hughes campaign in Massachusetts, and to be Summer street carrying with the rank and file and saw Charles Evans Hughes while he in his auto was surrounded by a local reception committee of 15 or 20 automobiles.

Baxter then went up to the Arena and sought to procure a seat, but the hall was filled.

He went to the rear door, reserved for guests, and a policeman refused him back with others.

Hughes hurried past, surrounded by the local celebrities, and into the Arena.

Baxter turned around and went home.

He says he was snubbed.

He had received an invitation to the Copley-Plaza luncheon of the guests reserved for the "reception committee."

Governor McCall, who was ill at home, is said to be much disappointed in his absence the invitation would be sent to Baxter, who is the grandson of a governor.

Local arrangements were in the hands of the Republican State committee of the Republican club of Massachusetts.

Hughes is back in New York much unaware of the feeling aroused by the arrangements locally made, for his reception.

Like Baxter, Secretary Butterworth of the Woodrow Wilson Business Men's League was not invited nor to get into the Arena. He counted through the real hole at the rear of the building.

City pavements blamed for many ailments

Within the experience of us all, the sidewalk has changed from a soft to a hard one.

Hard pavements have greatly improved our traffic conditions, but they have proved a serious menace to health and efficiency.

The records of the Hospital for the Crippled in New York show that in the year 1890, just before the advent of stony streets, Arch Trouble claimed 2.6 per cent of the new patients treated. In 1906, the percentage had risen to 18.3, and in 1914 to over 30 per cent.

Save your health

You cannot have the streets unpaved, the sidewalks turned to turf—but you can protect yourself from the pounding jars that shatter nerves and break down health.

O'Sullivan's Rubber Heels act as easy, springy cushions between your heels and hardwood floors and pavements. O'Sullivanize your step. Put the spring of new live rubber under your feet, and walk with the vigorous stride that goes with real success.

When you buy your new shoes, buy them O'Sullivanized. Up-to-date shoe dealers now sell latest style shoes with O'Sullivan's Heels already attached.

Insist on O'Sullivanized shoes—the new live rubber heels give the greatest wear with the greatest resiliency.

HARVARD PLANS FOR PERFECT POLICEMEN

Under the initiative of Mayor Walsh, of the record of Cambridge, two new movements in police work, both of which will be watched with interest by civic leaders, are under way that are:

1 A course of lectures by a Scotland Yard police expert at Harvard University for members of the Cambridge police department, the first college course in training in this country.

2 A school for patrolmen to select a man "who needs advice," persuade him to go to evening school and keep "tabs" on his progress.

The lectures course for the police and the "big brother" work for the patrolmen are outstanding parts of Mayor Storrow's idea that a policeman should no longer be a "flat-foot," a "harness bull" or a "night watchman," but should be a trained factor for public welfare and a preventive of crime and disorder.

TOOK TRIP TO NEW YORK.

The Mayor and Police Chief John F. Murray went to New York, and studied the methods there of police training. When they returned the Mayor suggested to Harvard University authorities a course of lectures for the Cambridge officials. To the suggestion was approved and in hearing Pratt was told by the Mayor today, he said:

"We have taken the first step in what should develop into a big advance in modern police systems and methods. The idea of having courses for police in a large university is not new in Europe, where each patrolman is an expert in his vocation.

"Professor William B. Munro of the civil government department of Harvard College is co-operating with the city, and will soon begin lectures especially prepared for the police. There will probably be three lectures each day, and the classes of lieutenants will assemble in one of the college halls. Many of these lectures will be all probability be given by O. J. Pudlick of New York city, the one responsible for many important changes in the New York police system.

HAS LARGER DUTIES.

"My idea of a policeman, and Chief Murray sympathizes with me, is that he should no longer be a negative force supported by the city and State simply to make arrests of those who do wrong, and to frighten mischievous boys into flight. He should no longer be seen walking the streets swinging his club and puffing terror into the hearts of all who break laws.

"The trained policeman who fits the proper viewpoint will make his chief duty the prevention of crime and misfortune. He should join in his functions physicians who prevent sickness, lawyers who prevent litigation, and commissions that prevent fire.

"The policeman is hired by the public to work for its material welfare, and his powers do not extend beyond what the people give him. When the public, therefore, find that an officer can do much more for a community by making friends of the boys and young men than by filling them with fright, that public will be quick to extend the policeman's powers and functions.

SHOULD KNOW LEADERS.

"If the officers should make it their duty to get acquainted with every gang leader in the city, and should bring influence to bear to get that leader into night school, or into a good job, the problem of a large part of law breaking would be solved at the beginning. When any gang leader begins to do useful things all the rest of his crowd follow in their leader's footsteps.

"It is not the purpose of policemen to take offenders into court; it is rather their duty to keep all out of court, and the kind of studies and lectures which will be given at Harvard will be in the direction of this new ideal.

TO GET AFTER BOYS.

The second phase of the mayor's plan—police help for boys—was conveyed to the department in a circular letter received by each member of the police department today from the mayor as follows:

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
Cambridge, Mass.
October 26, 1916.

To the members of the Cambridge Police Department.

The public schools and many public and private philanthropic institutions are now offering educational opportunities in evening school and civic centre work. No year in the history of our city has provided so many opportunities for our youth and for all classes and kinds of men and women in the way of training.

Our public schools are ready to teach English to the foreigner, elementary studies to those who have had limited educational opportunities; technical education for those who wish to prepare themselves for special work.

I want our citizens to avail themselves of these opportunities to the full, especially our young people. Many of these need advice and sympathy. If they could have put before them a vision of what they could do and be by working under the direction of sympathetic teachers, I am sure they would eagerly avail themselves of this privilege.

I want you to search out some boy who needs advice and have a heart-to-heart talk with him; persuade him to go with you to some one of these evening schools and introduce him to the master. After you have done this, I want you to keep in touch with him during his studies. Please report to me as soon as you succeed in finding your boy, and I shall later expect a report as to the progress made by him in his class work.

Respectfully,
WENDELL D. ROCKWOOD,
Mayor.

WILSON WOULD AMEND U. S. DRAFT LAW

By International News Service.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 27.—Charging that the Hay-Chamberlain army bill contains a draft clause and that President Wilson so admits, Allen T. Benson, socialist candidate for President, today made public a letter from Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, to show the President will move to have the language of the bill changed.

The clause to which Mr. Benson calls attention provides that in time of war reserve battalions shall take the place of those at the front and so on.

"If for any reason there shall not be enough volunteers and militia to keep the reserve battalions at the present desired strength a sufficient number of the unorganized militia shall be drafted into the service of the United States to maintain each of such battalions at the required strength."

The letter from Secretary Tumulty was in reply to one written by V. D. Taylor of Hot Springs, Ark., who at the suggestion of Mr. Benson asked whether the army bill contained a draft clause. Secretary Tumulty's letter as given out by Mr. Benson follows:

"In reference to your letter of October 5th, I beg to say that, as has been explained again and again, the clause referred to in the so-called Hay-Chamberlain bill applies only in time of war, while the bill was certainly not considered to language, the intention was not at all what is represented by its critics to be. I may add that the President feels that the language was too sweeping and hopes to get it limited at the earliest opportunity.

"I knew that the custom of the White House would compel Mr. Tumulty to answer Mr. Taylor's letter," said Mr. Benson. "I knew the facts would compel him to admit that I had told the truth. This he had done in a rather grudging manner, for those two big facts stand out, that the President, through his secretary, now privately admits that he has signed some sort of a bill relating to the draft which he now disapproves and which he will try to get limited at the earliest opportunity."

TRUSS WEARING CONDEMNED

Mere Mechanical Support Does Not Cure—Binding Pressure Declared Harmful.

At best, the truss is only a make-shift—a relief for a falling down, collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. STUART'S ADHESIF PLAPAO-PAD is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. When adhering closely to the body slipping or shifting out of place is impossible, so cannot chafe or pinch. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Mr. Hughes was clad in pajamas, over which he wore a rain coat. His hair and beard needed treatment, but he smiled as the train left the station amid cheers.

REJECT CHANGE IN COMMANDMENTS

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 27.—The House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in convention here, are reported to have officially rejected the recommendation of the commission that five of the Ten Commandments, as read in the communion service, be shortened by the elimination of the reasons.

Reaffirmation of the belief of the church in prayer for the dead was contained in an amendment, suggested by the bishops for prayer in the communion service for Christ's church. This would eliminate the words, "militant." Thus, leading churchmen explained, implying "that we do pray for those who have departed this life in God's faith and fear."

That the revision and enrichment of the Book of Common Prayer cannot be completed for another three years at least, was determined when the house of deputies of the convention sent back several sections of the report of a commission

MRS. LADD FILES DIVORCE LIBEL

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Allen Gates Ladd-Ladd, daughter of Henry Sherman Boutell, Minister to Switzerland under the Taft administration, has begun suit here to divorce John W. Brooks-Ladd, member of a prominent Boston family. Their marriage was one of Washington's most brilliant society events and President Taft and his Cabinet were guests.

The bill charges Ladd with improprieties with "various women," December 31, 1915. No names are mentioned in the bill.

Mrs. Ladd is now in Washington with her parents. The mental stress she is said to have been subjected to because of her husband's acts is alleged to have caused her to pass much time in sanitariums during the last two years.

EXPLOSION KILLS TWO; INJURES TEN

BURGLAR ATTACKS CAMBRIDGE GIRL

The Cambridge police are searching today for the masked burglar who attacked fifteen-year-old Adeline Burgess at her home at No. 257 Columbia street, Cambridge, beating her so severely that she was obliged to jump from a second-story window and flee for her life.

According to the girl's description, the man is of slight build and wore a brown overcoat and a gray cap. His features were concealed by the mask that covered his face.

Miss Burgess was alone in the house when she heard some one entering. She started to rise from her bed, when the intruder grappled with her. In her struggle to get free she was struck over the head with a potato masher, knocking out one of her teeth. She finally broke away, jumped from a window to the roof of a shed and from there to the ground. She was found in a hysterical condition and was taken to the home of a neighbor.

15 PUPILS DRINK BOTTLE OF WHISKY

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 27.—Fifteen pupils of public school No. 4, Rockaway, returned from their recess in a intoxicated state of mind. Their hilarity and inability caused Miss Katherine Mortarty to call in a policeman, who assured that the pupils be sent home. No arrest is off.

Investigation showed that in some mysterious manner a bottle of whisky had fallen into the hands of two of the boys when recess began. They divided the fiery contents with their fellow pupils. Normal work ceased by the use of a stomach pump.

HUGHES CONDEMNS POLICY OF WILSON

Charles Evans Hughes today is back in New York state, while local G. O. P. leaders pause to wonder whether his Boston speech has checked the tide of Wilson sentiment they feared was flowing through northern New England.

To an audience of 16,000 in the Arena, Queries spoke a doctrine of Americanism "unswerved by foreign influence, divided allegiance or any warping of politics to suit the purpose of any foreign power."

"If I am elected," said Hughes, "as I expect to be, we shall have an American administration with exclusively American policies, devoted to American interests."

NO WARPING OF POLICIES.

"I propose to be an American President, unswerved by any suggestion of foreign influence.

"We have no place in this country for divided allegiance, for ulterior purposes, for any warping of policies to suit the purpose of any foreign power."

At about this point one man in the crowd of 16,000 arose and said to Hughes:

"What do you say about Mexico?"

Hisses and catcalls drowned out the man's voice and a few rolled up newspapers and threw them at him.

"Answer the question," exclaimed the man.

"I did not hear it," replied Hughes.

Hughes held up both hands to quiet the crowd, and after the torrent of boots jeers and cheers subsided, he said:

"Don't make the strain on my voice trying to get order so that the gentleman can ask an intelligent question. Now let him ask it."

"What will you do in Mexico?" demanded the man.

"I will tell you, my friends," said Hughes, "as soon as I know what particular kind of a mess things will be in next March in Mexico."

FITZGERALD ENTERTAINS.

A crowd of 5,000 or 6,000 outside the Arena, were denied admission to the big show. John F. Fitzgerald drove up in his auto and entertained them with a series of questions he had previously submitted to Henry Cabot Lodge, without result, and which he then directed to Hughes. The outside crowd was as unruly to Fitzgerald as the inside crowd was to Hughes.

After the session with the solitary speaker, Hughes applied himself to his first direct attack upon two members of President Wilson's Cabinet, Bryan and Daniels. This was his attack:

"When the present administration took power, it showed its conception of executive responsibility by placing the two great departments which had most to do with our international relations, the Department of State and the Department of the Navy, in the hands of men who, however amiable may be their qualities—and I recognize fully their amiable and noble qualities in many respects—were absolutely unfitted by reason of those great offices."

Returning to the Mexican policy, Hughes said:

"I can tell you very clearly the principles by which I shall be guided in the first place, we will not meddle with affairs that do not concern the United States.

"In the next place, when we say that we respect the rights of small States, their authority to govern their internal affairs without our officious meddling and their position, we shall show that we mean what their rights are and shall show that we, in fact, respect them.

"And in the third place, we will have a firm policy in dealing with this and elsewhere, that American rights and property will be protected."

CALLS ELIOT "APOLOGIST."

Hughes gave a brief smack to his speech by next replying to the defense of the Wilson foreign policy by President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard. He called Dr. Eliot "the leading apologist for this administration," saying:

"I viewed with considerable amazement the suggestion that was made the other day by a great scholar—the leading apologist for this administration—that there was not only a departure from our time-honored policy with respect to full protection to our citizens, but that it was a departure which might be regarded with approval.

"When our opponents sought office they suggested no such departure. Before election, our Americans were asked to go to all parts of the world serving humanity. After election, they are told that their private interests do not concern the government and the flag of their country seems simply an invitation to come back as quickly as possible.

"I am amazed that it is suggested that a proper concern for the just rights of our people prosecuting their pursuits, being lawfully on land or sea, that that policy of protection should not be maintained because it threatens our peace. Is it possible that such a notion should obtain in the shadow of Bunker Hill?"

Hughes was given an ovation that included "three cheers for next President," called for by Chairman "Ned" Thurston of the Republican State Committee, and which lasted several minutes. His voice was hoarse from constant campaigning, but was heard in apparently every corner of the big Arena. Mrs. Hughes sat on the platform near him. He spoke about an hour.

POINTS OF SPEECH.

In the course of his speech Mr. Hughes

Condemned the Mexican policy as "a personal, vindictive war upon an unrecognized ruler."

Said the Nation must gird itself for the industrial competition that will come after the European war.

Disapproved any policy which would "promote the welfare of a limited few."

Condemned the Adamson eight-hour law as "class legislation for a particular group of workmen, at the expense of all other workmen."

Having said that the basis of American society is free thinking, a free press and the right of citizens to express their own judgment, Hughes concluded with this peroration:

"I have a keen desire to see, in the coming days when the great nations, disciplined, coming out of the awful baptism of strife—then I hope of the United States united with a keen sense of mutual co-operation and dependence, knowing that if labor and capital do not work together there is disaster for both.

"I want to see the United States go forward true to itself, holding its head erect among the nations, maintaining its rights, loyal to the standards of justice, and then we shall have America first and America efficient."

Mr. Hughes' criticism of President Wilson's policy in Mexico was severe. "It has created," he said, "an animosity that it will take years to allay.

"When anyone says that the administrative policy is a policy of peace and not a policy of war, I say that this war not only a policy of war, but of unjustifiable war.

"It took our armed forces to Vera Cruz. We slew several hundred Mexicans there. What was that, an act of peace? When our soldiers fell in battle there, what was that? A triumph of peace?

WHY IN MEXICO.

"We went there, what for? To get a salute. We did not get any salute. Did we get reparation? We got none. We destroyed, or took a large part in destroying, the only government that existed.

"We should have had the friendship, not the hatred of Mexico. We should have had our primary duty and not have intermeddled with things that do not concern us.

"I want to see our moral influence extend, because our diplomacy is talented and correct.

"In this great world of the twentieth century, which will be a new world, I want the United States to go forward, not deflect its course for this little matter of expediency, and that little matter of popularity, and this little idea of policy, but steadily, firmly, and consistently distinguishing itself before, and holding the increasing respect of every nation on earth."

Hughes said that if he is elected he will have "the ablest Cabinet that the country can supply."

ROOSEVELT BITTERLY ATTACKS MUNSTERBERG FOR LETTER

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Theodore Roosevelt took the bit in his teeth and, ignoring the advice of the Hughes campaign managers, attacked in bitter terms the men known as "fifty-fifty" in their loyalty to this country. The body of his attack was based upon the letter written by Professor Munsterberg of Harvard to the German chancellor.

"Professional German-Americans" was one of the terms used in describing the class of citizens.

"If an American had stated that war in Germany and if such a letter as this one of Dr. Munsterberg's was made public that American would not last twenty-four hours," he said.

"We may just as well definitely face the fact that no man can ever be a good American—no man can ever be a really first-class citizen of the United States—unless he is an American and nothing else. Recent events have shown us that the efforts to combine loyalty to this land with loyalty to any other can only result in weakening the loyalty or the capacity."

WILD APPLAUSE.

For thirty-four minutes 18,000 persons in the International Amphitheatre at the Stockyards howled, sang and waved flags while the Colonel, enjoying every moment of the tribute, grinned and waved a flag, sang and did a few jigs sat down and stood up again and suggested toilet for the band.

Just seven days previously, to the hour, Woodrow Wilson had stood where Roosevelt stood last night and was cheered eight minutes.

When Charles Evans Hughes spoke at the Coliseum several weeks ago the applause that greeted him lasted but five minutes.

FLAG FOR EVERYONE.

Every person in the great hall had been provided with a small flag. When the Colonel appeared the racket began, with Medill McCormick and Mayor Thompson acting as chief cheer leaders.

When the yelling had been on ten minutes, Mrs. Ida Wright, past president of the Ladies of the G. A. R., sent her flag up to the Colonel. He waved it joyously in time with the music.

At the end of seventeen minutes, Medill McCormick handed the Colonel a huge stuffed club, lettered "Roosevelt's big stick." The Colonel waved that, too. A woman sent up a sprig of green. The Colonel tucked it into his lapel.

"There's nothing yellow about that stick," shouted someone in the audience, and the Colonel shook it aloft.

After twenty-six minutes he asked the band to play "dixie" and when it complied and cheered with "Wearing of the Green," he tried a few fancy steps.

The bowling even continued when Conductor Weil took a chance on "Lighter Augustine."

HECKLERS DEFIDENT.

Scores of hecklers had been "planted" but they decided not to take a "chance" with the highly-strung multitude.

Colonel Roosevelt also spoke to 6,000 women in the auditorium. There was a triumphal procession from the train to the hotel, with hat-doffing in sidewalk crowds.

In his speeches the Colonel mauled the hyphen, scoffed at "too proud to fight," ridiculed anti-suffrage arguments, urged support to Hughes and condemned the terrorizing of Congress by the President in the passage of the Adamson law.

Strangest of the demonstrations that greeted him, and one that probably will give Democratic managers reason to revise their calculations of a big feminine vote for Wilson, developed at the women's meeting. During the polite welcoming cheer, the first real applause—a good solid, spontaneous outburst—came when the Colonel, in his mocking falsetto, repeated, "He kept us out of war." He told them he intended to make the same appeal to the patriotism of the women as he made to men. The women shouted, clapped and waved handkerchiefs again.

"I am not going to make an appeal to what I might call the early Victorian maiden aunts," said the Colonel, and the women gave him more applause.

And as he went down the line with reminders that "Star Spangled Banner" and "America" were each written about a "generation of Americans that was not too proud to fight," and that Washington's mother had not said, "Safety first, George," the applause swelled in volume.

CAN TRUST HUGHES.

One attempt at heckling was made. Roosevelt had said he would "fight at the drop of the hat," in certain circumstances.

"How about Hughes?" What would Hughes do?" demanded a feminine voice.

"Mr. Hughes can be trusted to keep his word," snapped back the Colonel. "When Mr. Hughes says we would not submit to such deeds as the sinking of the Lusitania or the killing of our citizens in Mexico, he means what he says."

In reply to hecklers, Roosevelt made this reply:

"One minute the Falaba or Gulflight was sunk, I would have put a marine guard on every interned German ship and then I would have said to Germany that we would discuss not how much Germany would give us but how much we would give back to Germany."

G. O. P. WON'T LET DEMOCRAT QUIT

Pittsfield, Oct. 27.—A Democratic office-holder trying to resign and being prevented by the Republican party in power, is the situation in City Hall.

City Clerk Norman C. Hull presented his resignation October 16. The coming election, however, is of such detail and importance that the Republicans want to hold City Clerk Hull over until after the election, fearing a new man in the office would not carry through correctly the ballot details. Mr. Hull affirms he will step out November 1.

STRAW VOTE CUTS WILSON'S LEAD.

Analysis of the returns in the country-wide presidential postcard poll being conducted by the Boston AMERICAN and scores of papers in every State in the union, indicate that although Wilson still holds a lead over Hughes in actual ballots in eleven of the States from which returns have been received, the percentage of the losses of the Wilson vote of 1912 is great enough to make even these States doubtful.

In thirteen of the states whose returns have been tabulated by the postcard poll Hughes leads. These States however fail far short in electoral college votes of the eleven in which the return favor Wilson.

In New York State, the returns from cities normally Democratic, which should give Wilson a huge majority total only 4,321 for Wilson and 6,949 for Hughes. The returns from the up-State voters in New York State have only commenced to come in. These returns change the total to a small degree, and show a decided shift of Wilson votes of 1912 to Hughes now.

Although the Wilson losses change the appearance of the Wilson lead in the New York totals, Indiana is other important State, which has been considered a "neutral" State ever since the Civil War, is apparently strong for Hughes by more than seven to six. A surprisingly large number of the Hughes voters were Wilson voters four years ago.

These "shifts" and "losses" considered for many important in forecasting the election than the bald totals, are set forth plainly in the detailed tables to be published in the Sunday AMERICAN. The totals for the twenty-four States heard from without the "shifts" are set forth in the following table:

	Hughes	Wilson
Massachusetts	1412	1412
New Hampshire	407	312
Rhode Island	342	94
Vermont	348	93
Maine	432	167

HUGHES MONEY WAITS FOR ODDS AS BETTING FAVORS WILSON

Election betting today showed Hughes a slight favorite at 10 to 9 in Wall street, but with current reports at the ratio time of increasing Wilson money and many bets made on even terms.

Another feature has been recorded in Wall street betting lines for the past 10 days.

Money at several Broadway pools, all enjoying brisker business, were reported to be seeking bank for Wilson bottom to give odds.

Kansas City reported that all pending bets were being covered. Wolverines of Detroit said that Monday's odds of even money had shifted to 2 to 1 proposition and Kalamazoo same.

Local enthusiasts who offered 2 to 1 on Hughes a fortnight ago, are now asking even money, according to Loeb-Hall agency.

The betting activities are greatest, as usual, in New York City.

In Wall street the Hughes backers, who several weeks ago were offering 2 to 1 on Hughes, found several money, while the men who had most of the Wilson money raised odds.

Several bets, amounting in all to $25,000, were made at even money, and many more at odds ranging from 2 to 1 to 5 to 4 in favor of Hughes.

It was reported by several betting commissioners that the Hughes backers were waiting to get the best odds obtainable. Edward McLaughlin, a betting commissioner, said most of the wagers he had placed had been at odds of 10 to 9 in favor of Hughes, with a few at even money

FRENCH MAKE MORE GAINS IN THEIR DRIVE AT VERDUN

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Oct. 27.—The French drive against Fort Vaux, northeast of Verdun, has made further progress.

The French lines, both west and south of the fort, were advanced in fighting last night, the War Office announced in its communique today.

While the French infantry were pressing forward in their enveloping movement against the German position at Fort Vaux, French artillery were pounding away against the Douaumont-Chenois wood line. It was dreary fire of the monotonous type but no less violent was the barrage cannonade of the French guns.

As the French pressed forward in their assaults the French batteries poured out a ceaseless rain of shells in front of them. The bombardment wrecked the German trenches and scattered reserves that tried to reach the front.

It has now developed that Douaumont Fort was set on fire by a German shell, and that it was still burning when the French stormed it.

GERMANS CONFIDENT OF VERDUN VICTORY

Amsterdam, Oct. 27.—Copies of the Lokal Anzeiger, the semi-official German organ, are reaching here, belittle the French success at Verdun.

"Germans should not take the little and isolated French success at Verdun to heart," the paper says. "We will soon win back the lost ground."

ITALIANS DRIVEN BACK BY AUSTRIANS

Vienna, Oct. 27.—(Via Berlin and wireless to Sayville)—Repulse of Italian detachments in the region of Krst highland has been reported by the War Office. The Italians advanced after heavy artillery preparation, but were driven back by the Austrian fire.

WAR SUMMARY

Verdun was a battle area again today. The French officially report that the Germans launched four successive attacks against the new French lines about Douaumont, that these attacks were all repulsed, and that the French then gained ground south and west of Fort Vaux.

It is improbable that these Verdun operations can be considered anything more than a threat by the French, a good bit of strategy, in an effort to draw German troops from the Somme and other fronts.

A French offensive from Verdun would be immensely difficult, because the main railroad lines into Verdun are under fire of German guns, and because any gains from Verdun toward Metz would simply extend and render more perilous the Verdun salient.

It is unlikely that any serious offensive from Verdun will even be undertaken until the St. Mihiel salient shall have been wiped out, and the line from Verdun to Toul straightened. If that were done, an offensive might succeed; and success would be important in that it would mean recapturing huge French coal and iron mines which lies between Verdun and Metz.

For the present, however, Verdun is probably only a threat. That it is a French threat, and not a German threat as was the case a few months ago, shows how the complexion of the fighting in France has changed. The Germans are strictly on the defensive now in that arena.

The Rumanians have destroyed the Danube bridge at Cernavoda, and apparently they did such a thorough job of it that for the present there will be no German attempt to seize it.

If the Germans wish to invade Rumania from this direction, however, they must build practicable pontoon bridges to transport their heavy guns as well as themselves; and the next aspect of the Dobrudja campaign—when the Rumanian army north of the railroad in the Danube cul-de-sac has been destroyed—may well be the battle for an opportunity to throw pontoons across.

Rumors today had Japanese and Russian reinforcements rushing to Rumania. There can be no doubt that the situation of that country is desperate.

The Russian weakness in artillery was testified to yesterday when they launched a strong infantry attack west of Lutsk without any artillery preparation whatsoever. The German curtain of fire wiped out the attacking force, and efforts by the Russians at other points were failures.

On the Italian and Macedonian fronts, the fighting was unimportant. Nothing for some days now from Greece.

VISCOUNT GREY SCORES U. S. ON SINKINGS

London, Oct. 27.—That Germany has violated her pledge to the United States in regard to submarine warfare ahores of times was the assertion in the House of Lords of Viscount Grey, minister of foreign affairs.

It was drawn forth by renewed criticism of the American government in regard to the recent torpedoings off the American coast by the U-53.

Lord Beresford, former commander of the British home fleet and spokesman for the navy, and Lord Sydenham took part in this criticism. Lord Beresford again intimated that the United States has stretched beyond the bounds of neutrality her position in the U-53 case.

If America warships had not been employed in rescue work Germany's pledges might have been publicly broken, Lord Sydenham declared. The act of United States naval vessels in practically aiding German submarine operations he characterized as stretching neutrality too far.

PLEDGE TORN TO SHREDS.

The discussion was opened by Lord Sydenham, author of numerous works of naval affairs, who asked whether detailed information of the sinking off the American coast had been received by the government and whether the United States had yet known whether it considered the circumstances in accordance with the pledge given by Germany. He declared that as a matter of fact "even before the U-53 incident that pledges was torn to shreds."

Following the statement by Lord Beresford of his belief that Germany was trying to force the United States into the war so that she could ask for peace on the plea that it was impossible to fight the whole world, Viscount Grey made a statement, which follows in part:

"We have no understanding with the American government as to what information they are going to get. All we can do is to obtain information for ourselves from such sources as are open to us. That is being done in America, I understand. Reports, I hope, will reach the Admiralty in due course and I see no reason why they should not be made public here.

SUNK WITHOUT WARNING.

Lord Sydenham quoted statements made by Lord Crewe in August of the number of vessels sunk by German submarines since the German government made a pledge to the United States, which apparently were not in accordance with that pledge, which included the firing of torpedoes at ships without warning and insufficiently providing for the safety of passengers when the ships were sunk.

"I am sure the admiralty can multiply instances, which have occurred since the middle of August and are occurring every week, of allied or neutral merchant vessels having torpedoes fired at them without warning and in some cases loss of life resulting from their crews being placed in open boats.

"I see no use at this moment of discussing the question. The pledge was made by Germany to the United States. It was not given to us. I do not believe that at present we can do any good by discussing what the policy of the United States is or ought to be. That is a matter for the United States itself."

FATE OF SWISS NOW IN BALANCE

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 27.—The increasing possibility of a break between Germany and Norway led today to widespread speculation over the attitude and fate of Switzerland. Ever since the outbreak of the war Switzerland has been pro-German and there have been times when the Swedish kingdom seemed about to join the German allies in the field.

Sweden has a much more powerful army and navy than Norway, but on the other hand there are ties of nationality between the kings of Norway and England which make it certain that England would be the first to rush aid to the Norse kingdom if she were forced into the war against Germany.

PARALYZED MAN FLEES CITY HOSPITAL

Louis Fedro, forty-five, whose arms and legs are paralyzed, is missing from the City Hospital and has left no clew behind him. The authorities believe that he fled in his night-clothing and clambered down several flights of stairs on his knees and out into the yard and street.

During the several days since he was brought to the hospital he has lain almost motionless, complaining that any movement caused him great pain.

The fourteen cases of infantile paralysis announced by the State Health Department makes a low record since September 7, when there were ten.

Northampton, Malden and Wakefield reported the deaths of Agnes Canavan, thirty years, a teacher in the sixth grade of the Hawley School, Northampton; Alfred Payne, the eight-year-old son of Hugh Payne, Payne terrace, Malden, and Antonio Pinzati, Wiley street, Wakefield.

SUNDAY PRAYER MEETINGS FOR CHILDREN

Boston boys and girls from ten to fourteen years of age will hold 120 meetings in the Billy Sunday campaign.

These meetings will be held Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays after school hours in the different sections of this city and will be in charge of Miss Alice M. Gamlin of the Sunday staff, assisted by James F. Barnes of the Y. M. C. A.

"The meetings will consist of singing hymns and praying," said Mr. Barnes. "They will be made interesting from the beginning. Boys and girls will sing Billy Sunday hymns together. Besides the four days of the week when there will be held in many churches, on Sunday, they will be held between 12 and 1 o'clock. No boy or girl will be asked to join any church, but they will be encouraged to give themselves to a Christian life.

RELIGION MADE INTERESTING.

"In every way, religion will be made interesting to the young and positive things will be said. There are 21,952 children between ten and fourteen years of age in Boston public schools. While we are not going to come into direct touch with all of these children, it shows what influence may be exerted upon all, the moulding times of their lives."

Gas pipes have been laid through the tabernacle grounds in case the electric lights should go back upon the evangelist while preaching. The six large wings of the autophone are now in place, eight feet over the preacher in the tabernacle. These metal wings will hurl Billy Sunday's voice at the sinners and make them hit the trail.

"These autophones just make every sinner shiver when he hears Billy Sunday dashing into the devil and knocking the saloon business," asserted "Joe" Spiece, who knows what Billy Sunday can do when he gets excited.

204 COLLECTION CANS.

The cans to take up the daily collections number 204. There are fifteen dozen of two-quart cans and two dozen of six-quart cans. The cans will allow every coin to jingle in them. The collections will be counted by six persons or more and vouched for in an account book with the signature of every counter.

The Church of the New Jerusalem, known as the Swedenborgian Church, has been "snubbed" by the Sunday Evangelist Campaign Committee, because they believe in many hells, while Billy Sunday only speaks of one hell. Billy Sunday believes in a material hell where the souls of the sinners are continually in torment. Swedenborgians believe "Hell has its origin in human minds, in the human heart and understanding. It is the supreme love of pleasure and gain. The hells are everywhere as well under mountains, hills and rocks as in the streets of Boston."

For his kind of teaching, multiplying hells, the Sunday Evangelistic campaign have not asked any of the Swedenborgians to be members of their committee.

Lutherans have declined to assist in the campaign.

GET RID OF LONG FACE, SAYS SUNDAY

"Billy" Sunday opens his ten-weeks' revival in Boston on November 12. In the tabernacle now being built on Huntington avenue. His sermons are unique. He hits the devil, Satan, evil of all kinds right from the shoulder. Here is a typical "Bill" Sunday talk taken from one of his sermons. The text of today's Billy Sunday sermonette is cheerfulness.

By BILLY SUNDAY.

Give your face to God and He'll put a shine on it. If you are one of the long-faced Boston brand of Christians, get rid of it.

God never put such a face on you. That's the kind of face the Pharisees had and Jesus said their faces were disfigured.

When a man tries to make himself without asking God to help him, he is sure to have a face as long as a smokestack—more or less. I tell you, the devil will bank his fire and go to church to hear a man like that give testimony.

God doesn't want you to look and act as if your religion affected you like the toothache. If it does, it isn't God's kind.

Don't go around looking as if you had no friends on earth or Heaven. You dishonor God by so doing.

The devil never put a wickeder lie into the heart of any man than that the way to be a Christian, is to be solemn and cold and sour.

In consequence, some homes need a hickory switch a good deal more than they need a piano.

The devil hates the church, but he likes the work some highbrows do in it.

ETHEL FRANK'S SONGS APPEAL

Madame Ethel Frank appeared in Jordan Hall in a program consisting of well selected songs in various tongues.

Madame Frank has a soprano voice, true, pure and clear, at times a little strident, when carried to extremes, but in general most delightful to hear. Her enunciation and phrasing are such as to present her selections in an appreciative manner, showing that the singer is at home in all styles and languages.

Notable and well known songs as "The Swan Wind," by Summer Salter; Handel's old and lovely "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair," and "The Three Jewels," by Hugo Wolf, these were most warmly placed on the programme, in fact songs, nearly most of us, and the "Chanson Triste" and "Le Matin au Bonsmondet," by Duparc.

The accompanist was most talented and showed fine judgment, as the singers were to prolonged applause.

CRAWFORD TO SHOW NEW DANCE STEP

So many requests for the formulae of the new dance step, "The Military Stamp," have reached Clifton Crawford that the comedian of "Her Soldier Boy" will give a public demonstration of the dance after tomorrow's matinee at the Shubert Theatre. Mr. Crawford will be assisted by members of the company and will personally teach those who apply—the audience being invited to come up on the stage for the occasion.

The dance is Mr. Crawford's own invention, and is a delightful and not difficult development of the popular one-step and "shied" dances that have so swept the country. The dance, as the name suggests, has a strong military flavor and was originally founded upon the "mark-time" step of the British army.

WILSON ACCEPTS RESIGNATION OF COLONEL G RAVES OF EIGHTH

By BERT FORD.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 27.—Word has been received at the Massachusetts Brigade Headquarters that President Wilson has formally accepted the resignation of Colonel Frank A. Graves of Marblehead as commander of the Eighth Massachusetts Infantry.

Colonel Graves was forced to resign eleven days ago under threat of charges which would have been preferred had he failed to surrender his command. Colonel Graves, who abandoned his uniform the day after he resigned, is now living at the Hotel Sheldon in this city. He has been on leave of absence while awaiting official recognition of his resignation in Washington.

Colonel Graves will leave El Paso as soon as his eye trouble permits. The first ulcer has been followed by two others and he has suffered intense pain. The worry and excitement attached to his sudden dismissal from the militia of Massachusetts, in which he served thirty-one years, has aggravated his eye ailment.

PARADE LATER.

General Sweetser conferred today with General George Bell, Jr., concerning the request from Boston that the Eighth and Ninth Regiments be sent there in full strength, instead of being thinned out by the diversion of out of town companies at Worcester. General Sweetser said to the AMERICAN correspondent after the interview:

"General Bell thought it best to let present routing orders stand. It would be difficult to change them at the eleventh hour, but the quartermaster-general has the power. General Bell came to this conclusion, in view of the fact that he had been informed that the Massachusetts Brigade was to be mobilized and paraded in Boston after all the units returned."

Officers of the Eighth and Ninth say the Federal government will save money by dispersing the out of town companies at Worcester and permitting only the local companies to continue to Boston. Colonel Edward L. Logan intends to parade ten of his companies regardless of the promised reduction of five companies at Worcester.

SAVING OF $700.

By diverting the Lowell, Lawrence, Worcester, Natick and Clinton companies the Federal government will save $700. If the State cares to pay this the full regiments would be able to march through the streets of Boston on their return and the brigade tournout could occur later. The Massachusetts Brigade at war strength is twice as large in men and equipment as it was when it left Framingham June 5.

The first sections of the Georgia troops were arriving when reports came from Juarez and Washington that raids were expected and that National Guard units may be retained.

General Sweetser notified Captain Dwight Cushing of the Eighth, brigade officer of the day, to receive the Georgia detachments as they arrived. The first battalions are assigned to the Fifth's camp. The quartermaster's depot reported that the rest of the Georgia infantry had been delayed by the burning of a bridge and forced to make a detour.

Revised plans arrange for the departure of the Eighth on Saturday and the Ninth on Sunday. The Ninth is expected to reach Boston first owing to the longer route to be taken by the Eighth by way of New Orleans.

McCall Urges Troops Return for Parade

Adjutant-General Pearson, acting under the personal instruction of Governor McCall, today wired the War Department a request to send the Eighth and Ninth regiments back home together for a big parade and celebration in the city of Boston.

The Eighth and Ninth are to leave El Paso tomorrow. Under the present routing some of the companies will be detached at Worcester and the others will come straggling into Boston.

RECEPTION DUE TROOPS.

Impressed by the belief that the Bay State soldiers are entitled to a hearty reception for their patriotic duty, Governor McCall at once decided to bring all his personal influence to bear in order that the two regiments may be brought to Boston at the same time.

From his home in Winchester, where he is confined by illness, Governor McCall instructed General Pearson to advise the War Department that the Governor of Massachusetts desires that every effort shall be made, regardless of expense, to bring the men to Boston for the reception that awaits them.

"I believe," said Governor McCall, "that I am voicing the wish of the people of Massachusetts.

"The men who constitute our militia left their homes and families, all that was dear to them, when duty called them. They were ready to give their lives if necessary in defence of their country.

WORK APPRECIATED.

"It is my desire, and the desire of all patriotic Massachusetts citizens, that our soldiers shall come to Boston where they can be given a reception that will show them that we appreciate the patriotic work they have done."

Governor McCall was informed that the troops were routed back by the Quartermaster-General at Washington.

The trains would bring them nearest to their home armories, in order to save the expense of transportation.

"The State of Massachusetts is ready to expend any reasonable sum that may be necessary," Governor McCall declared. "Any expense, in a matter of this kind, is justified."

The Governor's request was sent by General Pearson to both the Quartermaster-General and to the Secretary of War.

Governor McCall expects that the big parade could be held in Boston and that the various civic organizations could arrange for any supplementary entertainment for the men.

REPORT PRINCE IS MUCH BETTER

The condition of Frederick H. Prince, the Boston banker who is ill with typhoid fever at his Summer home at Pride's Crossing on the North Shore, was reported today as better than at any time since he was stricken four weeks ago.

KOENIG TELLS OF THE CAUTIOUS APPROACH OF U-LINER TO U. S.

Captain Paul Koenig, commander of the German merchant submarine Deutschland on her trip to this country, in the instalment of his own voyage made public today describes the arrival of the Deutschland in the United States.

He describes how she cautiously approached the shore, submerged, and how she met the pilot boat and began her triumphal procession up the Chesapeake Bay to Baltimore.

His story runs in part thus

"During the time we were on the Atlantic, when the weather was favorable, we dodged approaching steamers by turning away, but remaining on the surface; and did not fear if we were seen once in a while. But as we drew near America we customarily dived as soon as the least speck of smoke was seen on the horizon. Here in the neighborhood of the coast we did not want to be seen at any cost, as we had to take into account the presence of enemy warships.

HOLDS CONFERENCE.

"On the 8th of July I conferred with my officers concerning the best way to approach Cape Henry

"I favored that we should wait until daybreak, submerged in deep water about ten miles outside of the American territorial boundary line, to make certain that no hostile preparations had been made on the part of the enemy

"Krapohl, contrary to this, proposed that we, under the protection of the night, should approach the coast as near as possible and was supported in his opinion by Eyring

"I then decided to continue cautiously in the dusk. We proceeded until after awhile a pale light alternately appeared and disappeared on the horizon. This was the light of Cape Henry, America's first greeting

"Suddenly arose at the starboard side a white light which immediately disappeared. A moment later on the larboard side another white light also can be seen, which shines steadily We look at one another.

CREEP CLOSER.

"What the deuce was that? It looked like two warships exchanging signals. If ever, we had now to be on guard. Going at half speed, so submerged that the water reaches up to the conning tower only, with every man at the diving stations, we stealthily creep closer, piercing the darkness with our glasses

"It did not take very long before the steady light proved itself to be the masthead light of an outgoing peaceful steamer, which passed us at a short distance. Soon after we were able to distinguish by the glare of the other light a three-masted schooner which, in accordance with the practice among coastwise vessels, moved along without sidelights, and only at times showed a white light It was this that appeared to us to be the signals of warships.

"Being relieved of this anxiety, I now ordered full speed, and we soon sighted the steady light from Cape Henry, while the revolving light clearer and clearer can be seen on the horizon Now we knew that we had kept a true course. The sailing between the Capes was before us

"We passed the light buoys and the well-known clamor of the bell buoys also satisfied our ears that land was near by. As soon as we passed the bell buoys the boat arose to the surface. We now could see the lights from many passenger steamers, which did not, however, notice us, as we were still going without lights and we were opposite Cape Henry and had reached the American territorial (3 mile) line

HOISTED LANTERNS.

"Inside the American boundary line we hoisted the lanterns and went smoothly, until we saw the pilot steamer's red and white lights before us. We stopped and flashed the usual blue light. Immediately the pilot steamer turned its flashlight upon us, and, when he could not distinguish the outline of any boat, he cautiously drew near

"He centered his light upon us for a long time Time and time again, the flashlight swept the low decks and the conning tower of the Deutschland

"The unexpected sight seemed to have dumfounded our good pilot captain. And it took some time before the question was heard through the megaphone

"Where are you bound for—

"(In our answer 'Newport News' he asked the name of the ship. We told him, repeating it twice before he comprehended what kind of visit this was.

CAPTAIN'S GREETING.

"A boat came quickly toward us, and when the pilot had climbed up on the Deutschland a round hull to the deck, he greeted us with the following words from the depth of his heart

"Well, I'll be darned if it isn't you"

"Then he shook our hands heartily and expressed his sincere joy that he had had the opportunity to be the first American to bid the Deutschland welcome to the land of the free

"I immediately asked the pilot if we were expected or not. I was pleasantly surprised when I learned that a tug had been lying there for several days, probably waiting for us.

"We then started with our pilot to find the tugboat he mentioned. Meanwhile incoming steamers had discovered the strange newcomer and illuminated us continually with their searchlights. Thus our arrival in American waters became a fantastic night dance.

GLORIOUS PROCESSION.

"We went at daybreak into the bay Our journey became gradually a glorious procession. All neutral steamers, American and others, greeted us with three salutes, blowing their steam whistles and sirens Only an English steamer passed us in hateful silence, while the German flag broke out in the wind, and we looked at it proudly.

"The further we proceeded into the bay, the noiser became the turmoil

"The news of our arrival must have spread with great rapidity, because to our great surprise we met several hours from Baltimore by boats with newspaper reporters and moving picture photographers on board Although it was already growing dark, they eagerly took our pictures

"At 11 o'clock at night we stopped at Baltimore, and, with a groaning and creaking of the cable, the anchor was thrown down for the first time on the American bottom."

WILLIAMS HAS SLIM SHADE

Al Shubert as Good as Right There with Champion in Ten-Round Bout in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Oct. 27.—In a rapid ten-round no-decision contest, Al Shubert, the New Bedford, Mass., bantamweight, who held his own with Champion Kid Williams in a six rounder at Philadelphia last week, again proved to be practically every bit as good as the Baltimore Tiger.

The Dellsway Club was packed from orchestra to dome. It was a rough and hard fight all the way, with Williams' friends confident he hand Shubert what the New Englander's owner was sure he got did the superior work.

It was one of the best bouts local fight fans have seen in a long time. Shubert gave Williams all he was looking for, it's safely to the early rounds, when Jack had taking punch after punch, but without any hopes of serious knockout.

The fact that Shubert has been matched to meet Wolfgang here next month shows that the managing hell by the bulk of the best posted critics at the ringside. Hard to say at the time was little if anything to choose between the work of the two dusky little fighters.

While Shubert left the ring with his nose cut and gashes on his right eye and left ear, Williams will probably carry some of the marks he received to his grave. Williams' eyebrow was split, his lips slightly puffed and his forehead badly gashed.

Shubert clearly held his own in the first seven rounds, in fact, he gained the honors in the third and fifth. Williams' finish was the more spectacular and the big crowd was on its feet as the two battlers brought their encounter to a close.

The Gamblers

By NELL BRINKLEY

SHE is the sweet little girl from the small person class who looks up with [illegible] as a boon to the all of the dancing class down as your train slides through the country town to the [illegible] who eyes you under a black cigarette, with [illegible] diamonds like cracked [illegible]. And it is almost Adam [illegible].

I love [illegible] to play at [illegible] MASKED. Masked as to [illegible] sometimes peering out. And they exist [illegible] all three of them, love-torn man, ardent woman and daring Irritable Love. Of course it is the only game I know of where the [illegible] who sit in can all [illegible] were not masked. If mine [illegible] should [illegible] two be with naked eyes, so then [illegible] as close to [illegible] possible and so that their own [illegible] one to see and understand.

If only this old, old game of loving and being loved could be played with faces uncovered, soul looking out at soul, unafraid, all unhidden. But most times here they sit, the three of them—under the lanterns of Romance, who is always and because she must summon her moon, her flowers, her tenderest songs, her moon rippled water, her whispering trees, her winding walks and thrilling birds, her soft lights and hushed moments, all the treasure that she sets her stage with, for people who will play in disguise!

They sit, Love, laughing and bold, his sweet eyes glinting from behind black cover—the man, at his very kindest and best, intent, unknowing even many times that he has on his mask, playing to win, giving and serving and asking for everything in return, being blind to what he guesses that his lady love would have him be, slapping his mask to her ideals (as he reads them from her mask)—and the girl, laughing and eager, uttering what she believes is her own soul's speech, yet her eyes where the reality of her sometimes comes and shows its face, are strange and unreadable behind the black satin, and what both Love and the man dream they see there, from the oblique holes of their own masquerade, is an alien creature. Every one knows how distorted the world looks from the eyeholes of a mask! Every one knows how odd and piquant, provoking and singular, eyes look through the black slashes of a mask! The glistening, moving creature you see there is speaking even a strange language that the unmasked eye does not know!

Play your love game with eyes uncovered, with your own soul looking out, speaking its own language, calling its own call. Don't expect to win out if you and Love and the girl you strive for are all three pantomiming away in masquerade. What chance have you in the end?—for when the game is played and the girl you love has put her fingers in yours, and Love leans back with a deep breath—the masks' must come off. And if you never knew what was behind them—you lose —NELL BRINKLEY.

Have You Met Her?

The Mother Who Does Everything for "Her Children's Good"

By ANN LISLE.

Catherine Doyle was a hard worker. All no one thanked her for it—so her life was a gloomy affair which conducted itself after [illegible] edge.

At [illegible] she got up fire and [illegible] breakfast for [illegible] Then she [illegible] to work a [illegible] but quite without a [illegible] that would [illegible] for [illegible] when [illegible] were [illegible] faces to [illegible] for [illegible] and [illegible] liked [illegible] eggs fried while Father must have his boiled?

The [illegible] stirring a bit and an [illegible] must be constructed for the [illegible] appetite of Norah. Then there were the younger children to rouse, dress and send off to school. After that the beds had to be made, the whole place dusted and set to rights, the mending looked over, and by then the youngsters were home for lunch.

At 1 James arrived ready for a big [illegible]. As soon as the place was washed up after the children were [illegible] again, clamoring for bread and butter and sugar. They got the bread—and butter. Then there were a few odd jobs, and pretty soon it was time to get dinner.

Catharine Doyle kept a big house swept and garnished and [illegible] lately [illegible] from five well fed and clean [illegible] and neatly clothed, her husband, from the corner saloon—and money in the savings bank.

But she herself was shabby and entirely unversed in how to smile or discuss the topics of the day or neighborhood. She got [illegible] and no one missed her. Her face was set in the [illegible] mold of one who sees her duty and does it.

Duty to her meant easier all all round for the children when they were little and [illegible] healthy required [illegible] grown up.

Cat [illegible] was [illegible] a model [illegible] And her [illegible] and [illegible] glowing and scrubbed [illegible] that no one ever dared [illegible] a flower to "mess it up"—or pull a chair out and stretch in it easily with feet on another chair.

And Tim took to going to the corner saloon for warmth and brightness, while Anthony found his warmth and understanding in stables which were not orderly even in the way their hangers-on placed their bets. As for Norah, since she didn't have company at home, she took to haunting dance halls, and Reggie, aged fifteen, went with her—or alone when Norah wouldn't be bothered with the child. And Bessie disappeared, and it might have been better if Norah had disappeared, too.

"My children never talk to me. They shut their own mother out of their lives—and no children ever had a better mother," sobbed Catharine Doyle when the probation officer came to see her about little Terence's "being up" for stealing the third time that Winter.

And little Terence sobbed out the answer, "Ma, she washed me and scrubbed me till I got so likin' dirty boys 'cause I thought they hadn't no woman mealin' over them. And I had never no sugar on my bread nor no lollypops an' oranges like I seen the other fellows bringin' to school. So I took 'em. I didn't know no other way to get 'em—'cept but takin' 'em. And I wanted 'em bad. So I took 'em."

It had never occurred to Catharine Doyle that her duty as a mother included giving her children what they wanted. She gave them what she thought was good for them. They got eggs and meat and porridge, and they starved for—lollypops.

Catharine Doyle had seen her duty as a mother—and she had done it. She kept her house garnished and swept and in order, and never asked her girls to help their poor, tired mother wash the dishes. She had sacrificed herself to give the children what was good for them—and they starved for sugar on their bread and butter.

[illegible] you get Catharine Doyle?

"The Ringer"

FIFTH INSTALMENT

By Beatrice Fairfax

Novelized from the Scenario of Basil Dickey and Produced in motion pictures by Wharton Inc., Studios for the International Film Service Inc.

[illegible]

AFTER the midget ran away from me with such desperation [illegible] good, I stood waiting for Cutie to come to the hotel lunch which she had to take when a lad in the day's occupation permitted her.

I related my failure to get the dwarf to tell me anything about his whereabouts for the past few days and tried to persuade the pathetic mountain of flesh to display a little common sense. But [illegible] was [illegible] was fat. And she refused to listen to me.

While we stood talking the midget came back to his long postponed mid-day repast. Four Cutie drew herself up with a ridiculous assumption of dignity and cut him dead. The ugly little wizened face of the midget twisted into a sneer and then smoothed itself out again into a semblance of amiability.

The tiny man hurried to my side and said with a smooth purring like that of a cat whose back is being stroken the right way: "Well, miss, I've decided to confide in you. I'm in trouble with my girl, as you see, and I guess I'll better have a friend at court. If you come with me I'll tell you."

It was all so silly, so absurd. It seemed like a lark. I had a feeling that I was Alice in Wonderland. Once upon a time I had eaten the cake which instead of making me very big had made me grown up and old—and now I had eaten that other cake which contracted [illegible] and which [illegible] back to small. I was "seven," and this whole absurd little adventure was a child's dream of excitement. It needed the contrast of just such a burlesque romance to renew me for contact with the tragic affairs of life again.

So I followed the beckoning dwarf out of the tent, and I knew that poor, palpitating Cutie hurried to the door to watch us go.

Still the flitting dwarf kept just ahead of me, motioning in excited pantomime for me to follow him. His absurd feeling that we were fellow-conspirators in some adventure of great moment deepened my amusement. At last we arrived at the doorway leading to the stalls where the horses for the afternoon's race were kept. Here the dwarf stopped.

The Dwarf's Request

"I'll have to ask you to stoop again, lady, so I can whisper. If anybody heard me I'd get into awful trouble" said he.

Miss Fairfax is a very obliging young woman as you know, so she fell to her knees wanting to hear the secret which would solve Jimmy's mystery and cure ridiculous Cutie of her absurd infatuation.

I felt so helpful! And then around the corner of the box came two men. Hardly had I caught sight of them when my face was smothered in the folds of a handkerchief and I was seized and pinioned by strong arms. A second later I was carried into the stall where stood a magnificent black horse saddled and bridled and ready to run his race.

A second later the handkerchief which had muffled the lower part of my face was drawn up over my eyes, too, and I found myself tied firmly in the coils of a heavy rope. Then I was left to the warm silence of the stable.

Flies buzzed around me and the queer musty smell that is part of a stall penetrated through the folds of the handkerchief, which was fairly choking me. I had thought this a very funny situation.

It seemed inanitely less humorous now. I shook my head from side to side trying to loosen the folds of the muffling handkerchief. Then a harsh voice commanded me. "Here, none of that, you! I'm watching and you can't come no funny business. You just lie still until I get further orders what to do with you." So I lay still. There really was nothing else to do.

In the meantime, down in the county jail Jimmy had finished his box of cigarettes and had concluded the process of extracting information from Sam. He rose now and stretched as does a man weary from confinement. Then he grinned at Sam amiably: "My friend—did you happen to notice me wrestling with the constable when he brought me here?"

"You put up a pretty good fight," pard—but it didn't do you no good," grunted Sam.

"Didn't it," grinned Jimmy archly. "I think it did."

And he reached into his pocket and brought out a jingling keyring. "I extracted this bunch of keys from friend constable's pocket painlessly and quietly during the fight.

It was not "Mr. Hayseed," but Jimmy who spoke. Sam listened in open-mouthed astonishment which grew to a toothless and cavernous "Oh!" as Jimmy went to the door, reached through the bars and unlocked it and then, waving a good-by to the astonished prisoner, made his exit without the courtesy of offering to release the fellow sufferer.

Jimmy Dashes Off

"Well, I'll be jigged!" gasped the astonished Sam.

He was right—he would!

As Jimmy hurried away a string of explosive expletives followed him. He stayed not to argue, but hurried up the country road looking for a jitney which would carry him to the fair grounds.

Ten minutes later Mr. Barton hurried into the gate. The grandstand was filling and all the tense excitement of a race about to be run was in the air.

Under the grandstand surging crowds of men were oddling about the booths of the bookmakers. Near the entrance stood Ben Wilders, his fingers spread out to separate rolls of bills into separate units. Right and left bets were being shouted. Hands were blaring wildly.

Peanut vendors and purveyors of sandwiches and iced drinks were shouting their wares lustily. Bright eyed girls were jumping up and down and begging the [illegible] to place a bet for them.

All the insidious [illegible] betting has on humanity was coming [illegible] itself like a [illegible] about the crowd soon to be [illegible] its folds.

On a blackboard to the left of Wilder's booth the names of the horses and their mounts were posted, together with the odds.

Betty was the favorite and down at the end of the list was "Black Joe"—a rank outsider with all the odds against him.

CARNEGIE HERO FUND AWARDS MEDALS TO 5 BAY STATE MEN

Five residents of Massachusetts, and one in Maine, have been awarded bronze medals for acts of heroism by the Carnegie Hero Fund commission.

The Massachusetts and Maine heroes recognized by the commission are: John J. Toomey, No. 47 Chelsea street, Charlestown; Henry A. Massey, No. 876 Southbridge street, Worcester; Elijah Kawash, No. 329 Chestnut street, Lawrence; James J. Donahue, No. 24 East Water street, North Andover; Henry Abrahamsohn, No. 42 Bodwell street, Lawrence, and Earle L. Forrier of Cumberland Center, Me.

John J. Toomey, the Charlestown hero, won his medal by stopping a team of heavy horses, drawing a load, which had become frightened and were galloping along the streets on June 25. Seeing children on the street, Toomey grabbed the bridle of one of the horses. He was dragged seventy feet before the horses stopped. He received a broken knee and other injuries and was disabled for 164 days.

Elijah Kawash, No. 329 Chestnut street, Lawrence, a twenty-year-old weaver, saved Richard Haffar, another weaver, from drowning at Marsh, August 16, 1914. Haffar was in swimming and got in distress. Earle L. Forrier of Cumberland Center, Me.

BETHLEHEM AT 647, NEW HIGH RECORD

Industrial specialties and low-priced railroads were active features today. The New York curb market was strong and the market was generally strong and at noon nearly all important stocks had substantial gains.

Bethlehem Steel moved up five points to 647, a new high record, on reports of war orders.

Industrial Alcohol and Distillers Securities were particularly strong on announcement that these two companies had received orders amounting to $7,500,000, the former advancing 2¾ points to 147½ and the latter 1 point to 42.

Some of the low-priced rails were weak, Denver & Rio Grande preferred yielding 1½ points, its spectacular strength earlier in the week losing away when it was realized that the company is in trouble for defaulting guaranteed interest on $50,000,000 Western Pacific first mortgage bonds.

Missouri, Kansas & Texas preferred gained 1 point, but Hocking Valley and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie common 1¼ and Erie 1st pf 1¼.

First class railroads were strong, particularly the coalfields. Reading gained 1, Lehigh Valley 1¾ and Union Pacific 5. Other gains at noon were Chesapeake & Ohio 1, Southern Pacific 1, Bethlehem Steel 5, Cuban Cane Sugar 2 and U. S. Steel 1.

Copper stocks were generally strong on prospects of the metal at thirty cents a pound. It is believed that the allies were in the market for large quantities.

The Boston market was strong all morning. Gains at noon included Tonopah Creek 1¼, Butte & Superior ¾, Allouez 1, North Butte 1½, Utah Metal 1¼, Santa Fe 1¾, Boston & Maine ¼.

T. Dennie Boardman, the Boston real estate operator who was stricken with heart trouble at his Summer place in Manchester-by-the-Sea, Wednesday, was in favorable condition today, although still in bed.

"BARN-STORMING" TRUNK MYSTERY

Two things bothered the Chelsea police today. One is how did a big theatrical trunk find its way into the stable of Abraham Smith at the rear of No. 156 Addison street when the door had been securely locked, and the other is who owns the trunk?

The piece of theatrical baggage contains costumes and clothing. It is now at the Chelsea police station awaiting claimants. Mr. Smith locked his stable last night and went home. Today when he opened up he found the trunk on the stable floor. Patrolman William Porter acted as baggage man with the patrol wagon. The lock of the trunk had been forced, but its contents apparently had not been disturbed.

Reader! Are You for the Initiative and Referendum?

THE Initiative and Referendum are the means by which the voters may at any time take the final authority in important matters of legislation.

They enable the voters to veto a bad law or to enact a good law that the Legislature has persistently refused to enact.

They are not a substitute for representative government, but help to make it REALLY representative of the people's wishes.

They have been adopted and successfully used in twenty States of the Union, both Democratic and Republican, from Maine to California, as well as in Switzerland, in Manitoba, in Australia, and in New Zealand.

"They are developing a citizenship that cannot be fooled or scared or bought; that knows what it wants and knows how to get it. That is democracy."

In Massachusetts, in 1913, 74 per cent. of the votes for Governor were cast in favor of candidates who were pledged to the Initiative and Referendum.

The Representatives from six Massachusetts districts, in 1914 and 1915, were instructed to support this reform by overwhelming majorities, ranging from two to one in Newton to five to one in Weymouth.

Ex-President Roosevelt advocates it.

President Wilson advocates it.

The Progressive party advocates it.

It has never ONCE been rejected by the people.

The corporation lobby is everywhere against it.

You will be asked on the ballot at the State Election whether or not you want the Initiative and Referendum. If you DO, votes YES. If you are in doubt send for literature to the Boston AMERICAN.

Sarah Bernhardt's Birthday

The World Honors a Great Woman Whose Courage and Genius Typify the French Nation

Copyright, 1916, by the Star Company.

SARAH BERNHARDT has this week observed her birthday.

She spent it in America, working to earn money for the poor of France.

The genius and the courage of this great woman are typical of the French nation.

Like France, Sarah Bernhardt was great in her youth, and like France she is great and courageous in her old age.

Undergoing illness and an operation that would have put ninety-nine out of a hundred in the grave, and rendered the one-hundredth incapable of work, Bernhardt works on as ever.

To see this magnificent YOUNG old woman is to see in one living genius the history of the glorious French nation.

Her welcome in every city of this continent should typify the sympathy of America for France—

France the friend of this country when we needed a friend and when Lafayette brought France's friendship—

France the home of radical thought, the nation whose great thinkers inspired Jefferson and Franklin—

France the educator of the world since the day of Charlemagne—

France the great self-governing, powerful, determined republic—

France that will never be conquered because genius and undying courage are unconquerable—

France to whom the whole world, including her enemies, must pay homage.

Let the people of America seize their opportunity to honor this great nation, her citizens, her men and women of genius.

Once-Overs

Don't be the sort of an employe who must have instructions pounded into him before th. have any effect.

Don't be the kind that must be addressed in an angry tone if they are to be impressed.

It should be sufficient for any employer or superior officer to pleasantly request certain services from you.

The man who must be whacked and pounded into action is no good in any establishment, and the sooner such men get the gate the better for their employers.

It is too expensive to hire men to work and then have to hire others to watch them every minute in order that proper service may be secured.

The willing worker, the man who acts immediately upon instructions which are pleasantly given to him, is the sort of employe who is worth having.

Such a man gives honest service at all times, and this is what counts in the work-a-day world.

The Girl Who Drinks Is Foolish, Even if "Modern"

Dorothy Dix, in Answer to a Young Woman's Question as to Whether She Should Take a Cocktail at Dinner With a Man, Explains Why a Drinking Woman Is Usually a Weak One

By Dorothy Dix

"MY mother says that when she was a girl if a girl ordered a highball or a cocktail when she went to a restaurant with a young man she would have been considered not to be respectable. Nowadays when a girl goes to a restaurant with a man and orders lemonade or grapejuice people think her a prude."

The speaker was a young business girl, pretty, gay, spirited and attractive, and went on to say:

"The question of whether to drink or not to drink when you go out with a man is one that puzzles a lot of us girls. The first thing a man does when you sit down at a table with him is to ask, 'What will you have to drink?' And if you take a soft drink the waiter openly sneers at you, as if he pitied the man who had a 'dead one' on his hands, and the man almost invariably urges you to have just a little wine or some brand of a cocktail that he says is a baby drink.

There's Only One Answer to the Whole Question: "Don't Drink at All"

"Now we don't want to drink intoxicants with men. Neither do we want to seem old-fashioned and prudish, or to embarrass our hosts, and make them feel that they've taken along a prim Miss Nancy, who is going to be a wet blanket on a good time, so tell us what to do."

There can be but one answer to this question. Under no possible circumstances should a girl ever drink intoxicants when she is out with a man.

Of course, at every restaurant to which you go you see young girls taking one highball or cocktail after another, and you see these girls go out of the room with flushed faces and unsteady feet, and your heart sickens within you as you wonder where those stumbling feet will carry them.

The guardian angel that watches over every girl lives in her brain, and when she drugs it into stupor with strong drink the sentinel is off duty, and she has no defence against any danger that may threaten her. So long as the modern girl has all of her wits about her she can make good her boast that she can take care of herself, but when she has put that into her mouth which takes away her reason she is as helpless as an infant.

It has been my sad lot to hear the tragic stories of innumerable fallen women, and there has never been one of them that has not commenced with drink. Generally, in pathetic excuse, the narrator has claimed that she was given a drugged drink, or knockout drops were put in her drink, but that is beside the point. The cold, hard, bare fact remains that if there had been no drink there could have been no drugging. Nor is there any need to put knockout drops in the bottom of a woman's glass. Liquor itself delivers the knockout blow for women.

Soft drinks make a hard head, girls, and as long as you stick to them you are safe. You can walk the straight line instead of zigzagging off of it into the downward course of those women whose feet, as the Bible puts it, "take hold on hell."

You are safe even from temptation, for when a villain has evil designs against a girl he very first thing he does is to ply her with wine; that befuddles her mind, and inflames her senses. Just read the newspaper accounts of girls who marry on a wager some man they never saw but an hour before, of girls who suddenly disappear, while their frantic parents are importuning the police to find them; of girls who are found dead or mangled in some awful automobile accident that ended a joy ride, and you will find that the story always begins with "after a wet night in which many rounds of drinks were consumed."

A glass of cold water before you on a restaurant table is a certificate of character to every eye that beholds it, girls. Every one who sees it pays a passing tribute to you as a clean living, clear thinking, level headed young woman who knows her way about. But the girl of the cocktail or the highball is under suspicion. A girl is an emotional creature, and the flush on her cheek and the brightness of her eyes may be due only to the excitement of dining out and the thrill of the music and lights and crowd, but nine people out of ten will attribute it to drink.

That is why, when men discuss the character of a woman, the very first thing they say is that she drinks or doesn't drink. If she never drinks anything stronger than water, it takes overwhelming evidence to convince them that she is wrong in any particular; but if she drinks they are ready to believe her capable of any weakness or folly.

Men Don't Play Fair with Girls Who Drink, Neither Do They Marry Them

Remember this, girls, that most men never play fair with women. A man will spend hours trying to persuade a girl to do the things that he despises her for doing, and when a man tries to persuade you to drink, often as not he is simply trying you out to see what sort of a girl you really are.

And one thing is certain, and that is that no man picks out a drinking girl for a wife. He may like to take around a girl who is a good sport, and who can drink as many highballs as he can. He may even enjoy getting intoxicated himself in such company, but when he chooses a woman to be his wife and the mother of his children he doesn't select one who is what he contemptuously and vulgarly calls a "soak" or a "tank."

Women have pity on the weakness of a man who drinks too much, and a wife often clings to a drunken husband, but men seldom have compassion on the drunken woman. They kick her into the gutter, and the husband of a drunken wife doesn't weep over her. He gets a divorce from her.

Alcohol is a poison to women, girls. It robs them of their beauty quicker than anything else in the world. It makes them the easy prey of their own weaknesses and of the baseness of evil men. It ruins a woman, body and soul. Have nothing to do with it.

And if a man will not take you out because you order soft drinks instead of highballs, thank God for your escape from him.

The Puzzle

By Jane McLean

LOVE is a jigsaw puzzle, crooked ends
And tiny pieces to be fitted in.
Each day is but a moment that Life spends Bending above it, striving hard to win.

Some days the picture grows beneath her touch
And glows with life as though it had a soul;
And Life cries, "Love, you yield to me so much,
Why won't you let me see the perfect whole?"

It Is Possible, It Saves Time, Strength, MONEY

REAL poetry and common sense combined are written by James J. Montague for the AMERICAN. Here is a sample which contains a good suggestion for every mother of a family:

MOTHER READS THE ADS.

MOTHER doesn't ever know who wins the baseball game,
She never heard that Maranville has won immortal fame.
She wouldn't know who Speaker was, if hits an' her should meet,
An' he should lift his hat to her some morning in the street.
But she knows every store in town where she can save some kale
By buyin' stuff to feed us kids at what she calls a "sale."

JESS WILLARD doesn't mean a thing in mother's peaceful life,
She thinks that fistic carnivals is bloody, brutal strife.
She never reads the football notes; she'd b'lieve you if you said
That Harvard played with Yale last week, an' Yale come out ahead.
But you can bet she knows the name of every store in town
Where they are having "clearance" sales and prices is marked down.

SISTER reads the fashion news an' all the social chat.
She'll tell you always off the reel where Vincent Astor's at.
Hattie reads about the shows, an' wonders every day
If Andrew Mack has wrote a song or John Drew's got a play.
The sport news is my steady dish; an' politics is dad's.
My brother reads about the war, but mother reads the ads.

"Mother reads the ads," trying to make each dollar that the father earns do as much as possible for the family.

We write this to remind readers that the advertising announcements published in this newspaper, covering literally the whole of Boston, the activities, the offerings and the keen competition of all the great merchants, should be neglected by no reader.

Consider the value, the saving of time, strength and money to be accomplished by reading carefully the advertisements in this newspaper.

You know that the merchants compete keenly with each other. Every great store is managed by a man who has his mind not only on the present, but on the future. If he can please a thousand customers TODAY, by giving them some great bargain, he is building up good will for the FUTURE.

These bargains and all important regular offerings are advertised in the Boston AMERICAN. In many cases they represent the sale of goods at a price less than the merchant actually PAID FOR THEM HIMSELF.

If a man can sell a dresser, sugar, shoes, gloves, or anything else at a low price, entirely without a profit, or even at a loss, it is worth his while to do so—IN ORDER TO BRING NEW PEOPLE TO HIS STORE.

The great and successful store knows that in trying to serve the public the important problem is to get NEW people to know the store, its possibilities, its good service, in addition to keeping the old customers.

At night in the Boston AMERICAN, sitting in your chair, and comfortable, you can go through the greatest stores in the city.

You can learn exactly what is offered, where it is to be found in the store, what the value is and make your plans IN ADVANCE. If you were to walk through the stores for a week, you could not have as good an idea of what they have to offer as you can get reading the well prepared advertisements in half an hour.

You can see in the Boston AMERICAN in the evening what it is that interests you, and go the next day to buy it.

The merchants realize that women read our advertising at night and shop the next day, and are prepared for that next day's shopping.

Bear in mind constantly that advertising which is not successful does not last.

And successful advertising MEANS special opportunities and bargains, in addition to consistent, honest merchandising and giving good values.

Great stores have high-priced buyers, men and women that are paid enormous salaries to buy FOR YOU in all the markets at home and abroad with the greatest care and economy.

When you read the advertisements you learn just what these men and women buyers have been doing and you get the benefit of it.

In spite of all their care, buyers are often too enthusiastic, and buy more than one store can sell at a normal price. Then comes your opportunity.

The big merchants do not "carry over goods." If they find that a buyer has bought too much, they cut the price, and if necessary cut it again and again, in order to clear out what they have and make room for the new buying—constantly going on.

Advertising is a science, based on FACTS, and the intelligent study of advertising is an economic science upon which is based WISE ECONOMY. It is an important part of a housewife's duty.

"Mother Reads the Ads," says the poet Montague. So she does, and well for her family that she does.

Clothes for the family, for the girls, for the boys—all of these can be found with dollars cut from the price, by those that read advertising intelligently.

Do your shopping and selecting at first HERE, in these columns. Then, knowing what is offered, go out to buy with the three great economies:

TIME.
STRENGTH.
